CRESCENT CITY.

Is one of the most beautiful ocations in Ptorida. Tourists will find it an ideal spot to spend the wloter, or pass a few days of keen delight. The town is on Crescent Lake (an arm of the St. Johns River) and is 100 miles by water, and 77 miles by rall from Jackson-

The all day river ride on the steamer Crescent, from Jacksonville to Crescent City, is one of the delightful experiences of Florida travel. The steamer leaves Jacksonville at 8 a. m. every Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday, reaching Crescent City at 6 p. m. This trip is the only daylight ride up the broad and picturesque St. Johns. The steamer has pretty cabins and offers a delightful outlook even in stormy weather.

Crescent City is the center of the orange growing industry in middle Fforida, and beautiful groves surround the place. Good boating, hunting and fishing will afford amusement for sportsmen.

Naptha launches can be secured cheaply for water trips. Crescent City has good hotels and boarding houses at mode-before returning to Cuba. A man too economical to subscribe for his home paper, says the Kansas City Star, sent his little boy to borrow the copy taken by his neighbor. In his haste the boy ran over a $4 stand of bees and in ten minutes looked like a warty summer squash. His cries reached his father. who ran to his assistance, and, failing to notice a barbed wire fence, ran into it, breaking it down, cutting a handful of flesh from his anatomy and raining a $5 pair of pants. The old cow took advantage of the gap in and killed herself eating green corn. Hearing the racket, the wife ran, upset a four gallon churn of rich cream into a basket of kittens, drowning the whole flock. In her hurry she dropped a $25 set of false teeth. The baby, left alone, crawled through the spilled cream and into the parlor, ruining a $20 carpet. During the excitement the oldest daughter ran away with the hired man, the dog broke up eleven setting hens, and the ealves got out and chewed the tails off four fine shirts. There was no walking to and fro. The man on post must simply stand there in the deep shadow under the beech tree and peer and listen and think and feel his nerves gradually becoming raw. He sat down under his trembling legs and fought himself. thousand recruits have done that same thing, but only a few have conquered. Let his nerves get the better of him in the lonely darkness, and his will must be of iron to chase-away his fears. Imagination gets in its work after the first fright. Williams had no thought of running away. He could not have done so had he wished. The wind came again, telling of death and wounds and lone graves never to be resurrected for all time. The coons and possums rustled about, believing that he was asleep or had stolen away, and now and then a branch of a tree sawed against another with mournful sound. Something stumbled along on the opposite bank of the creek. It was only a sore backed horse which had been turned adrift from one of the armies as not worth the cost of the cartridge to shoot him, and the animal was browsing at the twigs and seeking to get down the bank to the water. To the recruit, crouching on his post, it was a bushwhacker prowling about and trying to locate him and drive a kulfe to his heart. There were the falling of dead limbs, the rustle of dead up among the treetops. A year later he would not have paid heed to one of these things, or, if he had, he would have reasoned them to a cause in a flash. "They are creeping up on me-they are closing in-they mean to murder me?" moaned the recruit as he hugged the ground and threw the cape of his overcoat over his head, as if that was

After that he had no will. A child could have crept upon him and led him away captive. He wept and prayed. He groveled and mouned.
